Spotlight: Shari Barkin, M.D., M.S.H.S.

Shari Barkin is an advocate for children, especially those who are challenged by cultural, ethnic or socioeconomic disparities. An expert on all pediatric topics, Barkin is especially well-versed on childhood obesity and ways to help parents and society slow the epidemic growth of childhood obesity. She is also a Spanish speaker who works with Latino children and families to improve indicators of overall health.

Expertise: Childhood obesity · body mass index · safety · violence prevention
Symposium highlights VU's clinical, translational research »

Metro Parks, VU team on obesity prevention project »

Event celebrates Vanderbilt endowed chair holders »

Lean learning and extreme giving »

Nashville Parks and Vanderbilt Pediatrics Awarded $12 Million to Fight Childhood Obesity »

Unique study helps Latino families live healthier lives »

The Center for Diabetes Translation Research is supported by NIH grant DK092986. Please acknowledge this in your publications.